

AIM to Guatemala: November Newsletter

A ride in a tuk-tuk vehicle was an exciting experience. You have to hold on for sure!

Kaylea (the amazing AIMer who is here with me) and I created this bulletin board for Thanksgiving. Everyone wrote what they were thankful for on the leaves.

The view we had driving through the mountains to get to the lake.

November started off by visiting the lake and going zip-lining in the jungle with a butterfly garden and gorgeous waterfall on the way back. After that, we continued with several outings/salidas for the children. We recently took them to a play area within San Martin, which is my favorite restaurant here in Guatemala. The children also experienced Lemon Tree, which is a huge play area with a café. They also had play time in a game room within the mall and a fun obstacle course at H.O.M.E. International.

H.O.M.E International had a Thanksgiving dinner for the staff and children. Our main staples were tacos and cake! I've been enjoying my time here in Guatemala whether it is watching the kids, going to the dentist with them, making forts out of sheets together, washing dishes, cleaning the kitchen, being the gatekeeper, or making coffee.

November also included an amazing tour of the bible school from Sister Lynne Jewett. It's mind blowing how many people the bible school is reaching! It is essentially changing whole generations of Guatemalans!

The director of H.O.M.E. International, Amber Corey, gave us a tour of the Mayan Ruins.

We had an outing for the kids, and the girls were astounded by the view of the city.
