It is so great to be back in Senegal, my home away from home. It is so beautiful here. I have truly missed all of my friends that I left here. Here are some of the exciting things I have been working on while I have been here this past month:

1. I am helping to teach Sunday school. We have two kids that are there at the start of Sunday school and come regularly, and then we have four more that often arrive late for class. We have started a new series in our Sunday school about prayer. I love the opportunity to teach this wonderful group of kids.
2. I am also preparing Sunday school lessons for a Sunday school project that Sis. Sully is putting together.
3. I have started to type a French book that is in a PDF into a word document. At first it was difficult because of the different symbols in the French language, but then Sis. Sully showed how to get them without searching in "symbols" for every single one!
4. I have also worked on painting at the preschool at the church. Currently, we are painting animals along the bottom of the wall.

Again, I am just so thankful to be back here in this amazing country!

Top Right: One of our church services. We had a record attendance of 17 people!

Bottom Middle: Some of the animals that we painted at the preschool.

Top Left: Our Sunday school kids working on a worksheet about praying.
